I tried this: $now = date('H:i', time()); echo $now; //outputs correct time, eg. 17:30:27 //$time is time() $time = strtotime($now); echo date('H:i', $time); //outputs 10:30:27, a difference of 15 minutes This 15 minutes is because there's a delay between the server and the client, and php and the browser. If the time is before the server time, then the time is added onto the server's time, which causes the browser's time to be the server's time plus the client's time. This 15 minutes is multiplied by 1000 and is rounded up. I want the server to set the time to the browser so that time is displayed as the time when the page is loaded. How can I solve this problem? A: I found the problem. The time doesn't reach the server until you clear the cache in the browser. Call of Cthulhu Call of Cthulhu [src]I don't know about you, but I've always been really into Cthulhu. He is a fascinating, Lovecraftian creature that I'm not sure I've ever really gotten into. In the first bit of Lovecraftian fiction that I ever read, the character of Cthulhu is just right, but it's always been a bit of a love/hate relationship. Cthulhu isn't exactly an ideal hero. He is incomprehensible, as the reader never quite knows how his mind works. In fact, Lovecraft himself says that he shouldn't
